Young Singers Will Launch Legacy 80th Celebration

by Christopher Cherry

The Greenbelt Legacy 80th Anniversary celebration gets off to a joyful start on Sunday, June 4 at 3 p.m. with a family-friendly concert at the Greenbelt Community Center Artful Afternoon, featuring The Chromatics and the Greenbelt Elementary School (GES) Chorus.

For the young singers from GES, the concert is a symbolic homecoming to the beautiful historic building that housed Greenbelt's original school. The chorus, under the direction of Lee Gibbs, will open the concert with a medley of three songs from the upcoming summer camp show, The Cookie Caper. The camp show highlights early events in Greenbelt history from a child's perspective, including the surprise visit of Eleanor Roosevelt to the school in 1937.

The three songs to be presented on June 4 have as their themes the start of a new life in a new place, the beauty of diversity and the precept that everyone's voice matters in our democracy. The first song, New Life in a New World, honors both the Greenbelt Museum Roosevelt Ride, a vintage-themed bike ride, Artful Afternoon's performances and arts-inspired workshops and live music in the Roosevelt Center at the Crazy Quilt Festival.

From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday, there will be a pet expo at the dog park on Hanover Parkway. Featured at the expo from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. will be a low-cost rabies vaccine and microchip clinic. The Crazy Quilt Festival is a free outdoor concert at the Roosevelt Center from noon to 8 p.m. on Saturday that features a wide spectrum of musical genres. The annual Not For Seniors Only workshop will be in the Community Center from 1 to 3 p.m., and will discuss alternative living arrangements and healthcare options. At 3 p.m., Mayor Emmett Jordan will offer remarks commemorating Greenbelt's 80th anniversary in the Community Center gymnasium. Following the address, the Greenbelt Concert Band will perform under the direction of conductor Joan Rackey.

The Greenbelt Museum will celebrate its grand reopening after a complete restoration and refurbishing and will be open for tours from 1 to 5 p.m. The Roosevelt bike ride through central Greenbelt will begin at 11 a.m. on Sunday at the Community Center, to be followed by a picnic and lawn games in front of the Center. Casual vintage attire encouraged but not required. Bring food for the picnic, or pick something up at the Farmers Market, open from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. At noon on Sunday in the Community Center gymnasium, the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Service will administer the Oath of Allegiance to more than 40 newly naturalized citizens from a diverse range of countries. Artful Afternoon will take place at the Community Center on Sunday, and will include Make an Art Deco Hat (1 to 3 p.m.), Message to Tomorrow (1 to 4 p.m.), artists open house and art exhibit (1 to 4 p.m.) and concerts by the Greenbelt Elementary School Chorus and the Chromatics (3 to 4 p.m.).

Volunteers Prepare to Respond To Animals in Emergencies

by Kathleen Gallagher

Emergency preparedness and response are not just for people anymore - or at least not just for two-footed people. Last October, members of the Greenbelt Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) presented a request at a city council meeting for support from the city in forming a Community Animal Response Team (CART), which in Greenbelt will be known as GCART (pronounced GeeCart). The team is hopeful that it may be up and running by the start of next year.

On May 24, six members of GCART, led by Laura Kressler, and Kris White, met with the city council to provide an update. All six are also members of CERT. Kressler and White are, respectively, the commander and vice-commander of GCART. Kressler, a veterinarian, is also a past-chair of the city's Public Safety Committee. White is the long-time chair of the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. Companion Animal Committee. Two additional members of the GCART board, Ronnie Mitchell and Ellen Weiss, were present, as were team members Charlene Backstrom and Pam Lambird.

Mayor Pro Tem Judith Davis conducted the meeting since Mayor Emmett Jordan was away on business. She pointed out that the events of 9/11 had awakened Americans to the need for emergency preparedness. Kressler agreed, adding that Hurricane Katrina was also instrumental, especially with regard to animal rescue. In her presentation last fall, she demonstrated that there are likely more companion animals in Greenbelt than human residents and that even if only 10 percent (2,500) of the animals were to require emergency shelter, that's a lot of animals.

In addition to concern for the animals, another driving factor for animal emergency response nationally is that it was realized during Katrina that the inability to rescue pets along with their people was a leading cause for residents to refuse to evacuate their homes or, in some cases, to attempt to return home before it was safe to do so. Kressler pointed out that this problem endangers not only residents but also the emergency responders attempting to help them.

Also reflecting the new consciousness about this issue, the Pets Evacuation and Transportation Standards (PETS) Act of 2006 modified federal emergency funding legislation to authorize the Federal Emergency Management Agency to provide rescue, care, shelter and essential needs for individuals with household pets and service animals, as well as for the household pets and animals themselves. It also requires that state and local emergency preparedness operations plans address the needs of individuals with household pets and service animals following a major disaster or emergency.

Celia Craze, director of the Planning and Community Development Department, which includes the animal control and animal shelter programs, told council that establishing an animal program to complement CERT has been a management objective for the department for several years.

Police Forum Draws Crowd For Questions and Answers

by Amy Hansen

The Police were out in force to listen to the community. On May 23, five representatives from the police department, Greenbelt Community Relations Advisory Board (CRAB), city councilmembers and about 25 citizens used the Greenbriar meeting room for about two hours to discuss police and citizen relationships.

The audience, made up of people from many parts of Greenbelt, had only good or neutral things to say about their experiences with the Greenbelt police, even as participants were repeatedly asked to voice their individual stories. Questions and concerns, however, included the vote of no confidence in Acting Chief Thomas Kemp by the local police fraternity, the record-low number of police in the department, and areas of Greenbelt that have higher crime rates.

This was the second of three scheduled listening sessions. The first was held in Franklin Park on November 29, while the third is set for Tuesday, June 13 at 7 p.m. in the Community Center. The session was moderated by Rashawn Ray, an associate professor of sociology at the University of Maryland who studies police and communities nationally and has been working on a long-term local study of police and community interaction. "Greenbelt is one of the areas we don't hear about, which is good," he said, because people are more likely to complain than praise.

The evening was divided into two parts: a general question and answer session for the whole group, and then smaller groups of five who addressed five discussion questions and then reported out.

Kemp started by thanking CRAB for the conversation. "I do not think Greenbelt has a problem with its police. We are blessed to be here." He acknowledged there was a vote of no confidence by some members of the Fraternal Order of Police. "That is a tricky one for me to

June is Peace Month

Since September 11, 2001, the Greenbelt City Council has proclaimed June as the city’s Peace Month. On May 22, it reaffirmed this precedent.

The calendar of events includes some interesting activities that are new for 2017, along with repeats of tried-and-true ones from past years. All events are free and open to everyone. For details look for the Peace Month calendar on bulletin boards around the city, as well as stories from sponsor groups in this paper. Keep updated through June by visiting the Peace Month calendar page at greenbeltnmd.gov.

New This Year

The city will sponsor a month-long write-a-thon in the Community Center lobby. Greenbelters can drop in to write a “Message to Tomorrow” about their hopes for a better community and world and what they plan to do toward making this happen.

On June 24 Public Works hosts a Rain Garden workshop and tour.

On June 25, the Greenbelt Museum sponsors a collection of local residents’ artifacts and stories about promoting peace over the years.

The Peace and Justice Coalition presents a pair of peacemaking skills workshops led by Jane Connor McMahon. The June 4 session focuses on family and community, the one on June 11 examines increasing trust and safety in schools.

Old Favorites Refreshed

During Greenbelt Day weekend June 3 to 4, the Concert Band performs a tribute to peace (Saturday) and new citizens are inducted at the naturalization ceremony (Sunday).

On June 16, the Greenbelt Writers Group sponsors readings on peace and on how to bring it to the world.

The Reel & Meal at the New Deal program on June 19 screens I Learn America, exploring how to welcome new immigrants.

On June 25 the Baha’i Community collects Bikes for the World repairable bicycles, parts and accessories for re-use overseas.

address,” he admitted. He then looked at the reasons for the vote, specifically the number of officers on the force.

“What you read in the News Review is true,” Kemp said. “We are dealing with an unprecedented personnel shortage.” The shortage is due to retirements and sick leave, he said, leaving the force down to 36 instead of the normal 53 members.

At this point Kemp said all but one of the officers on sick leave have returned, bringing the force back up to 43 officers. The department has been aggressively recruiting. The problem, Kemp elaborated, is that “everyone has his own police department around here. So everyone is trying for the same people.”

Captain Gordon Pracht said he is “reaching out to experienced police officers from other jurisdictions.” Kemp explained their goal is to show off the town and facilities. “We get them here, we show them what a special place it is.” At the same time, the officers say they are recruiting in areas that would reflect the demographics of Greenbelt. Kemp said they do this by placing ads in particular magazines or ads on radio stations that serve the demographic they are seeking.

Kemp noted that even as recruits are hired, it takes seven months for them to finish the academy and then another three months of on-the-job training before they are ready to be on their own.

In his role as moderator, Ray broke in, explaining that the shortage was endemic on the East Coast, not simply in Greenbelt. The number of police recruits is down both locally and nationally.

Kemp also discussed pockets of higher crime, mostly, he said, in places with higher turnover in the population. “We could always work harder to get over those barriers,” and he mentioned the meet-and-greet events and listening sessions that the police have held in Franklin Park.

Kemp enthusiastically revealed plans for the Greenbelt Police Explorers, a club for 14- to 20-year-olds that the police department will sponsor this summer. He hopes such a club will bring in young people interested in police work and create new pathways into the community.

During the second half of the meeting, everyone in the room met in groups of five. Groups were asked to discuss unsung heroes (both citizens and police), questions for police in general and experiences with police.

The goal of these meetings is to bring more dialogue between citizens and the police, said CRAB Chair Rick Ransom. “CRAB wants to maintain a long-term conversation, not because something happened, but to build the community.”

City Notes

Public Works staff attended the inspection of the 24th gate valve exercise at the Greenbelt dam, met with Planning staff regarding the Buddy Attick Park parking lot construction project and visited the Greenbelt Gardens with the Refuse and Recycling supervisor to review member trash pickup.

Horticulture/Parks crew installed a split rail fence at the playgrounds at 38 Court Ridge and Stream Valley Park.

Mom’s Morning Out preschool program passed an annual inspection with flying colors and received kudos from the Maryland State Department of Education.

Therapeutic Recreation staff reports 23 individuals were able to experience paddling on Greenbelt Lake. Many requested that this be offered again. Staff is working on future possibilities.

CARES hosted an evening grief counseling session in May to address the recent losses in Greenbelt due to death by suicide. The group members discussed topics such as how one might identify someone who is suicidal, whether it is okay to ask someone if they’re considering taking their life, the stages of grief, and signs and symptoms of depression.

"NO MATTER HOW MUCH RACKET WE MAKE, THEY STILL WON'T TAKE US TO THEIR LEADER."

Celibate Wild Nights

A Quiet Passion, a movie on the life of poet Emily Dickinson, opens this Friday, June 2 at the Old Greenbelt Theatre. Cynthia Nixon’s brilliant performance as New England’s most passionate spinster, who voyaged through oceans of metaphysics in the form of over 1700 diamond hard poetic thought experiments while rarely leaving her father’s back yard, convinces the viewer that this mysterious, intense celibate recluse is a true American master spirit. The movie was written and directed by Terence Davies. Jenifer Ehle is Emily’s sister Vinnie, David Carradine her father Edward and Duncan Duff her brother Austin.

Climate Action Network Hosts Annual Potluck

On Wednesday, June 7 from 7 to 9 p.m. in Room 114 of the Community Center, the Greenbelt Climate Action Network will host its annual potluck and launch OFF Fossil Fuels.

They will pursue a just transition to 100 percent renewable energy – not at some time far in the future, but right now.

After the meal, the network will watch a F&WW video and then discuss a local campaign to move forward on climate action. The discussion will involve a comparison of 100 percent OFF Fossil Fuels with a planned 50 percent Renewable Portfolio Standard bill aimed for the Maryland General Assembly in January 2018.

Attendees should bring a veg-an dish to share, along with a plate and utensils.

As always, the last portion of the evening will feature announcements and updates on local and national issues.

In Memoriam

Remembering Eli Flam

by Sandra A. Lange

We moved to Pinecrest Court about the same time as the Flams in the fall of 2003. Eli and Lucy Flam and my husband David and I became good friends. With his quick wit and corny puns, Eli drew people to him. Who else would refer to Roosevelt Center as “Rosie Center?”

We soon learned that before coming to Greenbelt, Eli had been a journalist and editor, so we snatched him up for the Greenbelt News Review. For 13 years he sauntered down to the News Review office at the Community Center on Tuesday afternoons. A theater and movie buff, he regularly reviewed plays at the Greenbelt Arts Center and feature films at the Old Greenbelt Theatre and the Utopia Film Festival.

His pithy prose was distinctive. In one such review, Eli wrote, “Far deeper cross plays on the fearsome fate of humans in The Lobster.” And in a review of Hunt for the Wilder People, he commented “. . . chunky, rebellious nativist nerd and his chill-out uncle are sought in wild New Zealand but the aunt plays a jouncy role”

Over the years, my husband and I exchanged email messages with both Eli and Lucy, often during the winter months they spent at their Florida residence. He was an expert wordsmith. Every message was an opportunity for Eli to bend the meaning of a word to express a different, quirky thought. And each message always ended with “Saludos, Eli.”

To David, he once wrote, “And then there’s the saying, “Don’t look a gift (or even a gift) subscription in the mouth.”

On one occasion, David invited him to join us in touring the National Museum of Languages. “Thanks for thinking of us,” he wrote. “We visited there a year or so ago, and will take a pass – i.e., a no-go – this time.”

About Woody Allen’s film Midnight in Paris, he said, “We, too/two, saw/imbibed Woody’s ‘Paris,’ heard about [Samuel] Morse (however coded), haven’t read the [David] McCullough book [The Greater Journey: Americans in Paris].”

One day we invited Eli and Lucy to join us at the restaurant Silver Moon in the Marriott Hotel. He replied, “Shine on, shine on Silver Moon for Saturday night, when we all can catch up on the last few months – with Stupor Tuesday [election night] behind us. And yes, the ride’s on us, in a Honda of a different Fit . . . we’ll be glad to take Mary Lou [Williamson], too, and see how three fit in the Fit’s back seat for the short haul to the Moon.”

On downing kombucha [health food drink], he said “We’re taking a break from a regular K [potassium] regimen, during which I add a generous splash (a splotch?) of raw apple cider vinegar in a glass of water to start the day. We did leave behind a footprint by giving a starter ‘mushroom’ to [a friend], who had lost his connection to the wondrous K. He claims it not only restores hair (on the head) but darkens it. You couldn’t prove it by me, but then again I was only imbibing for several months before heading South.”

In another message, he queried “Have you seen Mao’s Last Dancer, at the Old Greenbelt Theatre? We went last night, and all four in our group gave it very high marks (with no Marx).”

Living close to Cape Canaveral, Eli witnessed one of the launches, which drew this vivid imagery: “The liftoff was truly awesome. After 8:30 p.m., we were standing on the beach two blocks away with a couple of dozen people when way to the south the sky just above the ocean lit up in a kind of bouquet. Then a miniature but no less bright, intensely yellow sun rose, slowly at first, in a rising arc to the East. Soon it tempered into a blue-infused darker presence that shot through raggedy clouds like a Pegasus sprung free. Onward it curved, eastward and higher, shooting across the Atlantic as we

Workshops During Peace Month

In observance of Greenbelt’s Peace Month, Prince George’s County Peace & Justice Coalition will sponsor two free workshops about building peacemaking skills. Led by non-violent communication trainers Jane and Bob McMahon, the sessions take place the first two Sundays of June at the Community Center, Room 114, from 2 to 4 pm.

The June 4 workshop will be on Growing Trust, Understanding and Love in Families and Communities. The process called the Peacemaking Circle is for adults and children over seven years of age. It aims to help people to express their feelings and not feel alone with their worries; share the experiences of others and find a place to belong; resolve disagreements without lingering resentments; and build happier, more peaceful relationships.

Derived from aboriginal customs and Native American councils, this kind of dialogue is also known as a talking stick circle or listening circle.

On June 11, the workshop will be Building Trust and Safety in Schools. This workshop on restorative justice, an alternative approach to resolving conflicts in schools and society, is designed for high school students and adults. In schools today, educators still respond to what they perceive as student misbehavior with punishment, while restorative justice addresses root causes of conflicts in schools and society, seeks solutions by peacefully engaging the community and gives voice to all parties in the conflict. The workshop will describe how this approach arose in the U.S. and in the D.C. metropolitan area. For more information, call 202-684-5974.

Two Colorful Art Displays Installed at SHL Rec Center

by Anne Gardner

Artist Amanda Larsen shows off the temporary mural created by Springhill Lake Elementary School students during classes coordinated by the Recreation Department.

Two new art installations, created by members of the community, are adding color and visual interest to the walls at Springhill Lake Recreation Center (SHL-RC). The first is a permanent set of ceramic tile mosaic panels, which can be seen in the computer lab. The four panels in the “Crazy Quilt” series were made by Artists-in-residence Mary Gawlik and Gina Mai Denn and Greenbelt artist Jan Morrow. The panels incorporate tiles carved by community members of all ages at a Recreation Department Artful Afternoon workshop.

The second is a temporary mural created by Springhill Lake Elementary School students during after-school art classes coordinated by the Recreation Department. Supported by a grant from the Prince George’s Arts and Humanities Council (PGAHC), Greenbelt art instructor Amanda Larsen taught a series of four six-week art classes for different grade levels during the school year. In these classes, the first graders painted clouds, second graders made suns from orange and yellow paper, third graders drew houses and fourth and fifth graders drew animals with oil pastels. All of these elements were combined together to create the mural, which will be on display through the summer.

Councilmember Leta Mach and artist Gina Mai Denn discuss the new tile mosaic panels installed at the SHLRC computer lab.

All are invited to visit the center during normal business hours to view the exhibits. SHLRC is open Monday through Friday from 2 to 9:45 p.m., Saturdays 9 a.m. to 9:45 p.m. and Sundays from 1 to 9:45 p.m.

During the 2017 - 18 school year Springhill Lake Elementary students, again supported by a PGAHC grant, will explore art from different parts of the world to celebrate the diverse student body at the school. This will culminate in another temporary mural at SHLRC to showcase their work.

One-Minute City Stories

by Stacy Hindalong

“I’m the type of person who asks people questions,” said Beverly Palau. Palau is the Public Information and Communications Coordinator for Greenbelt. Palau isn’t satisfied with discovering the stories, though. She wants to share them, too. The result is Municipal Moments, a video series that is a new feature of the City of Greenbelt website.

Most videos take about a minute but some are longer. The stories are diverse and engaging. The editing is tight, showing Palau’s skill. Originally created for Municipal Government Month this past November, Palau’s true motivation was to share them with the citizens of Greenbelt. “City workers amaze me by how dedicated they are. And they have stories that are just as interesting,” said Palau. “I wanted to get the stories out there.”

With camera in hand, Palau trekked through the halls of city buildings looking for willing participants. And she found them. At the Springhill Lake Recreation Center, she found Brian Butler. Butler used to play basketball at the University of Delaware and was ranked fifth in the nation. Barbara Levermore from the Public Works Department is a maintenance worker who speaks Japanese and Spanish. Other employees talk about the work they do for the city and the programs that the city offers.

There is even a touching tribute to former City Manager Michael McLaughlin.

Municipal Minutes is part of a platform that was designed to bring all of the City of Greenbelt’s social media into one place. The Pinterest-inspired interface is familiar and easy and allows posts from any of the city’s social media sites to load automatically onto the page. This makes information easy for Greenbelters to access. The concept is called a Media Wall and is used by other municipalities around the world. When new City Manager Nicole Ard mentioned this to her, Palau looked into it and liked what she saw.

Positive feedback about the videos has encouraged Palau and she is looking forward to producing more. Palau found out early that a large camera tended to intimidate people. Wanting to encourage city employees to share, she leaves the professional equipment in her office and carries the hand-held camera. People tended to be shy but a few brave folks agreed to get in front of the camera for one minute. All videos are shot in one take. Palau found this casual approach was less intimidating and produced more interesting videos. She says she enjoys the project so much because “Everybody has a story and I like to find out what those stories are.”

“We hope we’ll never need it,” Craze said, “but we have had fires at multifamily complexes, as well as hoarding situations, where the shelter has been asked to help. But the shelter is small and limited. The GCART team would be a big help.”

The goal of a CART is to provide temporary shelter, defined as up to 72 hours. According to Kressler, that is typically the reprieve needed to make the next-level plan. Although the animals and humans would be located in separate spaces, the owners, unless unable, would continue to care for the animals, feed them and clean up after them. Not only is this practice better for both the pet and the owner, but it will reduce workforce needs.

Status

Noting that in October the team gave the city council a good rundown of all the tasks necessary to establish a CART, Davis asked what they had achieved and how many members were now in the group.

What they have achieved includes drafting bylaws, mission and goals statements, and a proposed amendment to the city’s Emergency Operations Plan to include animals. They have elected a board of directors, started to recruit members, with 14 now on board, started training and are beginning to develop standard operating procedures.

AKC and Hyattsville

At the council meeting last fall, Kressler identified as a primary goal the preparation of an application for a grant from the American Kennel Club (AKC) to partially fund acquisition of a response team trailer, similar to the one used by CERT. Kressler said the application was completed in draft and simply awaiting a green light from council.

A requirement of the grant is that one or more local AKC groups agree to sponsor the applicant group. The GCART team is clearly delighted to have received the enthusiastic support of the Hyattsville Dog Training Club as its AKC sponsoring club. The club will also commit $1,000 toward the trailer for the Greenbelt team and provide assistance in raising the total of $12,000 required to match the $10,000 provided by the national AKC. The trailer itself will be “fully loaded” and provide all the necessary supplies and equipment to enable GCART to be ready to roll. The trailer would then become the property of the City of Greenbelt.

The team has also been making presentations to groups and participating in events, which are activities important to its function in providing education on animal preparedness. In the fall, Kressler had stressed their interest in working cooperatively with the other municipalities in the Four Cities Coalition. The team recently made a presentation at a Four Cities meeting and participated in Berwyn Heights Day.

Vivian Cooper, animal control officer for the City of College Park, was present in the audience and attested to her city’s interest. Both College Park and Berwyn Heights have tentatively promised contributions, pending the development of a memorandum of understanding. Kressler said that despite early interest, there had as yet been no follow-up from New Carrollton.

Davis said the city had designated a $1,000 one-time contribution toward the trailer. She asked what GCART was expecting from the city. Kressler responded that they hope to receive annual funding up to the level of that received by CERT in the budget (currently $500) and that they fully expect to continue to do fundraising.

Noting that the structure is established and the process is on its way, Davis asked when they expected to launch. Kressler replied that they are already doing training, which includes CERT training and additional training in animal rescue and care, and they expect to complete paperwork fairly soon. They hope it will be possible to acquire the trailer by the end of the year.

Membership in GCART is not limited to Greenbelt residents and it is understood that a CART will also be responsive when possible to emergencies in other nearby locations. Requests for help would likely have to be made to the Police Department or to City Manager Nicole Ard. Like CERT, GCART would be affiliated with the Police Department and work under its direction when deployed.

Anyone interested in learning more about GCART, becoming a member or possibly contributing when the team has reached a point of accepting donations, can ask for more information by emailing GreenbeltCART@gmail.com. The team can also be contacted via Greenbelt CART on Facebook or Instagram. Notice of upcoming meetings will soon also appear in this newspaper.

Greenbelters Rally to Keep The New Deal Café Open

by Susan Harris

The New Deal Café, often called Greenbelt’s Living Room, changed kitchen management in late 2016 with mixed success, causing business to decline. By early March a new management system was in place and the Café began opening early for coffee and pastries, but it is still operating at a loss and reserves are running out. This is despite the countless volunteer hours being donated to keep expenses as low as possible. There are fears that business may not pick up fast enough to keep the doors open very long.

An emailed “Alert!” went out to the Café co-op members about the situation, and there was a large turn-out for the recent annual membership meeting to find out how to help the Café survive. Here’s how:

Spread the word about the New Deal’s food (especially breakfast and lunch), drinks, music and other events; schedule meetings at the Café; come regularly and bring friends; and volunteer, which helps to reduce expenses.

Members also heard lots of encouraging news at the meeting: rave reviews of the Café’s new Vigilante coffee and pastries during its new morning hours (from 7 a.m. weekdays and 8 a.m. weekends) and the successful new Sunday buffet brunch. Members also heard about more changes coming soon: breakfast sandwiches and Monday morning hours, table service, pour-over coffee and loose teas, among others.

As a New Deal member and regular, I was heartened by the news of improvements but most of all, by the outpouring of love for what is much more than a restaurant and music venue to Greenbelters, but its primary social hub. The alert asked members to imagine what Roosevelt Center would be like with no New Deal Café but instead, a Dollar Store or similar retail outlet.

That’s hard to imagine for most Greenbelters, who rely on the Café for a wide range of live music (with no cover charge) as well as poetry, games, deaf brunch, art shows and artist receptions, karaoke, comedy, open mic for kids and adults and meetings of all sorts. Or it can be just a friendly hang-out for newcomers in town or a safe haven for the unattached.

New Radio Station WPGC

WPGC, “Voice of Prince Georges County,” was inaugurated Saturday with Greenbelt Mayor Frank Lastner as one of the speakers at the first broadcast.

Broadcasting from Suitland, Md., WPGC may be heard at 1580 kilocycles. Owner is Harry Hayman and Ralph Tabakin is manager.

First in Prince Georges

The station is interested in civic affairs and says it will help local organizations in their activities, campaigns and other projects.

Lastner was appointed by the county council of Democratic clubs as representative to the station for forums and discussions on the forthcoming election of county commissioners. (Lastner was selected by the State Central Committee to run on the Byrd ticket for commissioner).

“Thanks for keeping an eye on the mailbox,” he wrote to David. “We’ve alerted the local mailman about our return, so between that and the change-of-address card filed up yonder things should proceed on an even keel (or axle).”

One year while in Florida, Eli and Lucy made their Greenbelt house available to visitors of a nearby neighbor. “It was a pleasure to help out good neighbors, a sort of modern-day extension of the Roosevelt Good Neighbor policy – and FDR was Greenbelt’s godfather, n’est-ce pas (or – yes! – our nest pa)?”

This past October, when category 3 Hurricane Matthew battered the Florida coast, we wondered how Eli and Lucy fared. He wrote, “With a newly-acquired cat, we evacuated to a handy ‘inn & suites’ that took pets... from Thursday to today. The house held up nicely, though we were greeted by many hundreds of fallen branches and branchettes. And as we were cleaning them up this afternoon the AC kicked in. Music to our ears.”

Eli recounted celebrating this past New Year’s Eve. “Last night we downed champagne and homemade ‘rollmops’ at midnight for the first time in years. This evening will feature an open house at home for a couple of dozen mostly long-time friends young and older, with recently acquired Maine coon cat as co-host....Into the new year we’ll look for Tortilla Soup; fervently recommended is Fences, which probably will be shown at OGT. Trying to keep up exercise-wise without being uppity is a regular battle. Instead of snow, these no-longer snow birds have been reveling in sunny skies and temperatures regularly topping out in 70s-80s.”

David recommended the book A Man from Moscow and Eli replied, “The Count Rostov novel has been already requested through the New Smyrna public library. Great (grated?) minds working in concert – or at least in some reading. Speaking of which: Have you read any Christopher Buckley farragos, such as Supreme Courtship? (His father was William Jr.)” Eli frequently sent us to google. Farragos?

After a brief vacation, Eli noted, “We’re finally in the clear from whatever we picked up in Guatemala; I’ve started challenging twice-weekly, two-month, two-hour therapy sessions at the local hospital, while keeping up with other (h)exercises; Lucy continues to peg away at our garden front and back and is ready to resume long walks on the beach. And we’re wrestling with the idea of pitching in with Indivisible Volusia (our county). Keeping us in quirky company is Mila the cat.”

Eli Flam had a deep appreciation for the natural world and often walked around Greenbelt Lake, hiked in the woods and visited parks and scenic areas from Canada to California. He enjoyed playing softball well into his 70s and was a regular at the Aquatic & Fitness Center. A gracious host at dinner gatherings, we enjoyed many meals together over the years. I will miss his friendly greeting, his compassion for others, the twinkle in his eyes, the wry humor, the soaring intellect. I will miss seeing him standing at my front door wearing his signature floppy tan safari hat and holding a bowl of figs or a bottle of wine. Saludos, Eli.

spirit of the original Greenbelt residents (traditionally referred to as Greenbelt pioneers), as well as the new American citizens who will have taken the oath of citizenship earlier in the day, in a public ceremony at the Community Center at noon.

The second song, Paint Me a Picture, celebrates the beauty of a world painted in a rich palette of colors. The third song in the medley, We the People, is inspired by the preamble to the U.S. Constitution, which is depicted in sculptor Lenore Thomas' stone murals on the Community Center's exterior. The words "We the People" are inscribed on the lintel of the main entrance to the building.

Following the young singers opening, The Chromatics will take the stage. Perennial Greenbelt favorites, The Chromatics are a unique high-energy vocal band with long-standing ties to Goddard Space Flight Center. They perform a diverse repertoire of songs, including hilarious original compositions and entertaining science songs, such as their signature (astronomically correct) numbers.

For the concert's finale, The Chromatics and the GES singers will join forces to sing Take a Message to Tomorrow. The song is about sending loving care into the future by taking action to improve the present. It also provides the title and theme for the Message to Tomorrow project, an 80th anniversary celebration activity.

As a personal commemoration of the civic activism and forward-thinking leadership that characterized Greenbelt from the beginning, Greenbelters are invited to write themselves a letter, outlining their hopes for the future along with the steps they plan to take to improve themselves, their community and the world. The letters will be collected in a special box in the Community Center lobby throughout the month of June. These "messages to tomorrow" will be mailed back to the writers in June 2018.

Citizens can draft their messages at the Artful Afternoon on June 4 or anytime during the month of June. Letter forms and envelopes will be provided in the Community Center lobby.

In addition to the concert, the Artful Afternoon will feature a drop-in hat-making workshop led by artist Amanda Larsen from 1 to 3 p.m., where event-goers can create an Art Deco party hat, inspired by the architectural and design motifs from the era of Greenbelt's founding. The Community Center's artists in residence will also be holding open house from 1 to 4 p.m. Following the concert, birthday cake and lemonade will be served.

The Greenbelt Legacy celebration will continue through the end of 2018 with a series of events, exhibits, and film showings, along with feature articles in the News Review.
